C. S. BARTON, P. M.

The Faults of Victori.—The Nebraska bill has passed; a solemn compromise which protracted our Union thirty-four years, has been trampfed in the dust; the followers at the beck of the executive in anticipation of profit from its patronage, have raised the yell of victory, cannons have been fired in the nat onal capital in honor of the auspicious event! And what, we ask are the finits? Dissatisfacton, grief, distrust, indignation, and loss of confidence in Southern honor throughout half the States of the confederacy.—[N. O. Creecent.]

[From the S. Francisco Herald, Sept 21st.] Cruise of the British Sloop-of-War Trincomalee.

We are indebted to one of the officers of the Trincomalee for some interesting incidents of her voyage. This vessel remained at Honolulu from May 19th to June 1st, during which time the frigate Diana was at the same port. Entire good feeling existed between the British and Russian officers, attending balls and fraternizing heartily together, notwithstanding it was supposed at the time that war was declared, although no official notice had been received to that effect. This made no difference, however, as regarded the Trincomalee. Being attached at the time to the Discovery squadron, and carrying supplies for their relief, she was, by the usages of nations, not liable to any atack. As, in the Ochotsk Sea, the ice broke up much earlier in the Artic than usual, thus relieving the Plover from her detention at Point Barrow much sooner than expected. No news had been obtained of the Investigator, and there is but little hope of the rescue of those on board from this side of the continent, and search for them is to be abandoned after this season. It is to be hoped that, like Capt. McClure and associates, we shall hear of them on the Atlantic side of the continent. Not a word was heard of the missing whale-ship by any of the Arctic squadron, and the representations made of the great scarcity of provisions in that region in the winter time, is very disheartening to the riends of those on board. The Trincomalee arrived at Port Clarence, sitnated at the entrance of Behring's Straits, on the southern side of Cape Prince of Wales, on the 25th of June, 1854, having passed through the Pass of the Four Mountains, one of which, bearing South South-East, is a volcano. The snow caps these Islands, which all assume a conical form to within about forty feet of the water-the mean height of the four being about fifteen hundred feet. This Pass is recommended, there being less curent than in Amoutka or Segouan. The object of the Trincomalee's voyage was to deliver stores to the Arctic squadron. The Ruttlesnake has built a store to receive the provisions which must be left at Port Clarence for H. M. Discovery ship Investigator, As the Trincomalee bore orders for both the Rattlesnake and the Plover to return in the summer of 1855, we may therefore conclude that should not Captain Collinson's vessel, or any of her crew, fall back on either Point Barrow, where the Plover winters, or be heard of at Point Clarence, no further search will be made on the Pacific side beyond this

An excursion was undertaken into the interior from Port Clarence, by some officers of the Trincomalee, who succeeded in entering the River Agepuc in boats. The scenery is very tame, consisting of moorland,-not a bush or tree to be seen for miles. The highest tree seen by the party was after leaving their boats, which stood about fifteen feet. Ptarmigan, wild duck, and hares, are very numerous. To arrive at the River, there are a series of Lakes, ranging twenty miles from Port

Situated on the Ageopuc are some "Ice Cliffs," containing Ma nmoth remains, some of which are in possession of the officers of the Rattlesnake. The Trincomalee fell in with the ice off Norton Sound, on the 24th of June. It had cleared from Port Clarence a fortnight before her arrival. The Straits at that time were clear throughout. The Hattlesnake was frozen in the previous year about the middle of November. Our informant says that Port Clarence appeared a better place to winter than Grantley harbor, the pressure of the ice being found less in the former place. The mosquitoes are more numerous there than even in any part of Central America; a slight air carries them off, but during a calm day it is impossible to walk without a veil encircling the hat. Our informant states that he inhaled mouthfulls. Salmon, salmon peal and

Clarence, to be passed through.

trout are taken in large quantities there. The natives are extremely docile, and very intelligent; but, as is the case with the Esquimaux generally, very lazy. The only wood they can procure is that drifted from,-no one knows whereout of which, by management of walrus tusks and whale bone, they contrive admirable spears and bows and arrows, for killing the seal and bear, of which animals their winter stock of food is formed. During the latter part of the winter, they are reduced to a state of semi-starvation, and then are even content to eat the hides of animals, in which fore their dogs-a noble-looking breed-have a share. One mode they have of catching the bear. is by a piece of frozen blubber, in which is doubled a piece of whalebone : the animal greedily swallows it-the blubber thaws, the whalebone stretches, and the brute dies in agony.

Since the above was in type we have had an interview with an officer late of H. B. M.'s Ship Plover, sent to the assistance of the Northern discovery ships, and have obtained from him the following additional information. Their ship wintered at Point Barrow, in the Arctic, during the winter of 1853 and 1854. While lying there a party from the ship made an excursion as for as Point Bherings, a few miles to the eastward of the river Colville, where they fell in with a party of Indians, but not understanding their language, could not make inquiry of their regarding the Investigator, Capt. Collinson, K. B., of whom the Piover was in search, or of any wrecked ships. They were frozen in at Point Barrow, Sept. 23d. 1853, and were entirely freed from the ice July 21st. 1854, arriving at Port Clarence, August 1st. A. bout the 26th of July, off Point Hope, spoke ship Gigeon Howland, Bryant, of New Bedford, eleven months out, (had taken no oil in the Arctic,) who gave them information of the probability of the Europern war, and also the fact of Capt. McClure's discovery of the Northwest passage. There were but few whales in the Arctic. Off Port Clarence was boarded from the ship William Rotch, Morslander, of Fairhaven, which vessel had lost anchor and taken one whale in the Arctic. The Plover. after having received on board her stores from the Trincomalee, left Port Clarence for Point Barrow, where she will pass the winter of 1854-'55.

Our informant thinks that if any vessel had been cast away near the shores of America, they should have obtained some knowledge of the fact in their interview with the natives, who had evidently traveled from the point where shipwrecked persons would probably be, and he is of opinion that if the missing whaler is ever heard from, it will be on the Astatic coast.

Arrival of the Discovery Vessel Rattlesnake. Interesting News.

The Rattlesnake, a British vessel sent out from England nearly two years since, to search for Sir John Franklin, arrived on the 25th, and anchored at Saucelito. The health of the crew during the voyage has been excellent. The Rattlesnake and the Enterprise are the last of the vessels sent out after Sir John Franklin. They are now upon their way to England. The Enterprise was at Port Clarence, Aug. 21st., all well. She has effected a passage through the ice to the other side, but made no new discoveries in regard to Sir John THE FRUITS OF VICTORY.—The Nebraska bill Point Barrow, to recall H. B. M. Discovery saip
